Coming! The Most Important News of this, or any other Year, about Antiques Collecting Information!

WHAT is it you have wanted most in your collecting interest? What books have you purchased? Why? Have you, at your finger tips, a mine of information, uncluttered, popping up at your beck and call? No . . . you must dig and dig and dig. For the past three years Spinning Wheel has been planning and working to accomplish what we conceived to be the simple, yet perfect answer to the needs and desires of every collector, every dealer, every student, scholar and researcher, and every home owner or home maker wanting to enjoy the pleasures of antiques as a part of the home. The work of years is about to be fulfilled. The greatest value, unmatched at any price, is scheduled to come to you in Spinning Wheel. Look for the announcement in full in the June Issue. And put a big ring around July 10th on your calendar. That day is publication day of the New, enlarged, augmented and consolidated Spinning Wheel.

Spinning Wheel will be the biggest value in Antiques publications of this or any other age or time . . . . We think you will agree with this appraisal, not our own, but that of half a dozen specialists who have expressed the opinion unsolicited and spontaneously upon hearing of the New Spinning Wheel. To all present Subscribers of Record . . . just wait until July to know how lucky you are!

Antiques in the Making, or May Day, 1859

In various parts of the country, a certain day in spring was designated as "moving day". On that day old leases expired and new ones went into effect. Hundreds of families moved to new and better, or new and worse, quarters. All their goods were moved by horse-drawn drays, tumbled about, battered and broken. The streets were jammed with moving vans. And in this hurly-burly, what was new or moderately new furniture and household equipment was started on the pathway to antiques status. "Three removes are as disastrous as a fire" was not a pleasantry, it was close to the truth. But there was some fun in the process, as our illustration from Harper's Weekly, April 30, 1859, proves. While picturing a New York City moving day, the scene might just as well be labeled Moving Day in Dubuque, or New Orleans, Savannah, Charleston, Baltimore or Detroit.

Toy Cast Iron Locomotive Makes Excellent Lamp for Child's Room

The delightful little miss here pictured, Louise Coady, loves her new lamp. The simplicity of the arrangement of fixtures and base comes alive when decorated with the toy locomotive which, in the 1890's, was perhaps a ten or twenty-five cent item.

This little lamp was displayed in one of the booths at the Country Antiques Fair, 71st Regiment Armory, New York City, on the opening day of the 1951 show.

BOOKS!

About Antiques

"There is one sure way of doubling the pleasures and the profits of collecting and that is own and read Books about Antiques."

☐ Victorian, Cinderella of Antiques, by C. W. Drepperd. One "Must" book $3.95
If you have, collect, or will fall heir to any so-called Victorian this one will guide you rightly!

☐ Treasures in Truck & Trash, by Morgan Towne $2
Declared by "Antiquarian Bookman" to be the best there is in its field. It tells you what's what and its worth!

☐ Handbook of Antique Chairs, by C. W. Drepperd $3.95
This is a Must book for every one who collects seat furniture.

☐ American Clocks & Clockmakers, by C. W. Drepperd..$4
Still the most for your money in any clock book ever published.

☐ American Historical Views on Staffordshire China, by Ellouise Baker Larsen $15
The masterpiece in its field, and a must for the advanced collectors.

☐ Decorating for and with Antiques, by Bjerkoe $3.95
How to live delightfully and by your own decorating efforts, with the antiques you collect.

☐ 200 Years of American Blown Glass, by the McKearins. A Sumptuous Volume $15
Not likely, ever, to be topped by any book on fine glasswares.

☐ ABC's of Old Glass, by C. W. Drepperd $4
Just what the name implies . . . and it's all here from A to Z.

☐ Old Silver & Sheffield Plate, by Oakie $5
Facts, marks, datum and so a collector's delight.

☐ Primer of American Antiques, by C. W. Drepperd $3.50
Over 50,000 copies sold. A gold mine of information in words and pictures. A one-book library!

☐ Currier & Ives, by Harry T. Peters $5.95
The condensation of the massive and now almost unprocurable earlier volume, with pictures in full color and in monotone. A beauty.

☐ New Geography of American Antiques, by Guild & Drepperd $4
Pictures by one expert and words by another make this an excellent book. It gives the regional significances in understandable form.

☐ Old American Houses and How to Restore Them, by Williams $3.75

The famous "Flying Angel" or Gabriel vane made by Cushing of Waltham. There are some excruciatingly comical imitations and caricatures of this vane extant. But this is the factory-made Gabriel from which the imitations were made .

Weather Vanes . . . Big Business or Folk Art?

by Jane Scott

THERE is a tendency today to find folk art significance in all things. It is about time that all of us become aware of the fact that our colonial activities, our Revolution, and our Federal union are themselves evidence that folk art, as a European tradition, found the going so tough on these shores that it died. We are a highly successful nation because, while we did not murder folk art with malice aforethought, we did almost completely eradicate the reason for its existence!

Folk art thrives where the people at large are denied possession of the luxuries reserved for their so-called betters. Our colonies were settled by people who wanted to escape such conditions. From the 17th century, our history contains documentary evidence that we were continually attempting to convert luxuries into staples, and to make the staples available to all.

Right now there is evidence that weathervanes or weathercocks are being promoted as folk art. Historically, weathervanes were badges of importance on churches, cathedrals, moot halls, official offices, castles, and chateaux of the Renaissance. Many of these weathervanes were effigies of the cock that crowed three times when Peter denied his Master.

By the 17th century weathercocks were quite common in England and on the continent of Europe. These wind indicators were made of bronze, copper, pewter, wrought iron, and other materials. It is not at all surprising that the tradition of weather vanes as appurtances of churches were used in the American colonies of New Amsterdam, New England, Virginia and Maryland. Weather vanes were useful as weather indicators by telling wind direction. But they served also as signs, and quite frequently gave a popular name to the church on which they were affixed. The Shanghai church, the Flying Angel church, and the Golden Cockerel church were names deriving from the weather vanes the edifices displayed.

A home made Gabriel. The date is probably 1880's when this style of facial hirsute adornment was popular among the gay blades. This example is painted iron. The design is cut from a single sheet of wrought iron, probably on an anvil with cold chisels. Shown courtesy Joe Kindig, Jr. & Son.

Weather vanes in our colonies and early Federal era were definitely not folk art expression. The larger weather vanes were produced as specialties in shops and factories. There were big ones and little ones, copper ones gilded with pure gold leaf, wrought iron ones, and even cheap ones of plated iron. Yet when an individual didn't feel like buying a weather vane at prevailing prices, he most certainly could attempt a replica, hammered out or carved in his basement or attic. Or, he could go to a local woodcarver, blacksmith, tinsmith, or sign painter and have a vane made at a low price. Many of these were amateur, some of them were crude, but most of them are quite engaging in quality.

Now, Mr. Lindeman, will you please tell the Spinning Wheel readers about your set of 12 Fruit Plates? I have no recollection of any Fruit Plates. Let me refresh your memory. These are an original set of 12 plates, 7" size, with centers of cherries, or blueberries, or plums, or peaches, or nectarines, scalloped gold-lined borders in various pastel colors, all proof except one plate which has a spiderweb check. Now do you remember? I don't think I ever had 12 Fruit Plates. Why, only Mink Hill Farms would have that many. Isn't it a fact that you have them now, that they are beautiful and priced $38.75 for all 12? Well, it is possible. Do you own these 12 Fruit Plates and are they for sale at $38.75? Answer yes or no. Yes. And what did they cost you? I refuse to answer on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me.

Our Milk Glass passes every test,
It's old, authentic and the best.

A.B.C., Dundee, New York

There are, of course, two sides to the question of what is folk art. The most ardent advocates of the folk art source of nearly everything in America we call antique, can see cosmic, social, religious or mystic significances in everything the people made for themselves. Yet any honest appraisal of the situation must contemplate our ancestors as human beings just like ourselves, who, when they could not afford to buy what they wanted or could not get from local sources what they wanted, attempted a homemade equivalent or had some local artisan make the object for them at a price below that prevailing for expert workmanship.

If this is folk art then I would have to agree with the term. But if embroidery, or home-made pottery, or amateur painting of 1820 is folk art then it must be folk art today. And I, for one, do not think that it is. It is a far happier thought to consider the self-sufficient, self-reliant American colonists as just making for themselves what they could not get otherwise. The home-made weather vanes that survive were not made by depressed and frustrated people, but by the kind of people who would say, "By heck, I'm not going to pay such a price for a weather vane so I'll make one myself or I'll have my friend Jim, or Bill, or Joe, knock one out for me."

Of course, I must admit this is just one person's opinion, and as such, not important. But what is important to all of us is the reason for anyone's opinion. My opinion of weather vanes and weather vane production is based on documented facts about them. As it happens, I can lay before you pictorial proof of popular and factory production of most of the weather vanes that have survived, and which are erroneously designated as "folk art."

Grasshopper.

No. 410. 42 in. long. $60.00

42" grasshopper weather vane by the Cushing Company of Waltham, Mass. Copper, covered with gold leaf. Vanes such as this are now wrongly called "folk art."

Here is some of that evidence, drawn from the catalogs of just two weather vane makers, together with a list of the vanes produced by these manufacturers. Where the name or designation of a vane is starred, that vane was made of copper in a three-dimensional effect, and originally covered with gold leaf. The non-starred examples were produced of either ungilded copper, bronzed copper, polished iron, or other metals.

Now a word about weather vane prices. The L. W. Cushing Company of Waltham, Massachusetts, established 1852, offered vanes at prices ranging from $12 upward to $250. Their celebrated Flying Angel was 32" long and priced at $25. Their grasshopper was 42" long and priced at $60. Their Goddess of Liberty was priced at from $25 to $150, depending on size. Their Clipper Ship vane was a $100 item. Their steam fire engine vane, (erroneously attributed to "an original by Amos Keag" in the Index of American Design,) was based upon an actual engine made by the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company of Manchester, N. H. This vane was priced at $200 in a 48" long example, and at $150 in a smaller size.

Top to bottom: Osceola, or Indian Chief; medieval rooster; crowing cocks in two varieties; fish. All of these are professionally made weather vanes by Westervelt of New York, but duplicated by at least two other manufacturers with slight variations in design. Dates range from 1840's to 1880's.

Profitable New Fields for Collectors . . .

III -- INKWELLS!

Pair of reclining figure inkwells made at Bennington. Light Brown Rockingham glaze.

An Editorial Representative from Spinning Wheel pays a Visit to the Breeding Collection and Comes Back with Her Bag Full of Pictures of Rich, Rare and Curious Inkwells

WE remember Jimmy Durante singing a song in which men are advised to say it with flowers, fruit or candy . . . but never to say it with ink. It would be sort of silly to observe, or consider it original to say our ancestors were wedded to ink as a means of writing because, before the invention of the typewriter, everybody used ink. Since the custom was universal, and the mind of man (and woman) is eternally inventive, "it would be indeed a curious thing if there were no curious inkwells," to borrow a phrase from Earl Breeding, one energetic collector of these containers for writing fluid. Mr. and Mrs. Breeding maintain a delightful apartment home in New York City and make many visits to their New Hampshire "real home," the old Ward house at North Hampton in the heart of the "antiques belt" of that region.

Mr. Breeding began collecting inkwells less than a decade ago. Not until 1942 did he begin seriously to pick up examples. "What struck me," says this genial collector, "was that you seldom seemed to find any two alike. Everywhere, in shops and at auctions, there seemed to be a chance to buy a different type and kind of inkwell. And almost always you could buy them for a song. Maybe that's how I learned to sing . . ." One look at the Breeding collection of inkwells is all the proof one needs that here is not only a fascinating collecting opportunity but that here also is a lot of social and commercial history. "Back of every written communication of any kind, up to recent times, there was an inkwell. Some offices had as many as fifty. The government once owned them by the tens of thousands. Schools bought them by the millions. And every citizen who could write had one or more inkwells at home," is the way Mr. Breeding explains the prevalence of these containers for ink.

"The False Move" potlid made to serve also as an inkwell. The well appears as a projection on the back of the lid, and extends downward into the pot, penetrating the contents.

He is firmly convinced that nobody ever will have a complete collection, but that a collector can start now with the resolve either to find a new and different one each day, each week, or each month, and manage to do so for as long as he cares to go on. Of course, the one-a-day schedule would mean you'd have to "work" at inkwell hunting. We asked Mr. Breeding if there were any known rarities that were not easy to find at any price. He replied, "In your Spinning Wheel for October, 1950, on page 14 you pictured pomade and shaving soap potlids of some rarity. One of these was a transfer printing in colors, on Staffordshire, of a scene titled "A False Move." It is John Bull and the Pope of Rome, playing chess. There was a very special issue of that shaving soap container with an inkwell hidden under the top, with the pen-hole exposed as an orifice right over the chessboard."

"Papier Mache Staffordshire" Spaniels

These are somewhat scarce objects of the 1840s or earlier which are seldom met with nowadays. In fact many collectors do not even know they were made. Sometimes called "unbreakable Staffordshire," and more properly so, as that is why they were made of papier mache. We have 4½" high spaniel at.....$7

And 4" high Spaniel at.....$5

Cut, Valanced Rim Compote, of clear crystal, 7" high; 7½" diameter.$25

LUSTRE PITCHER PARADE!

If you Collect Copper Lustre, here are some really good examples at fair prices. No duplicates. Act fast!

(1) Six inch copper lustre pitcher with bands of powder blue, basing raised flowers in gorgeous colors. A really fine example, slightly rough base $27.50

(2) 4½" copper lustre pitcher with bands of scenic quality in Sunderland lustre. A really choice piece, $20

(3) 5" copper lustre pitcher with bands of mustard yellow decor..$20

(4) 3½" copper lustre pitcher with blue and sand red bands $12

(5 & 6) MUGS, under 3 inches high, one banded and one dotted in contrasting colors on copper lustre, each $9

"Horn of Plenty" Spill Holder, topped with a band of gold on the glass. 4½" high $6.50

"Paneled Grape Spooner" (or open sugar; without cover) 5" high.$3.75

"Twin" Daguerreotype Case. Made to hold two pictures side by side, not face to face. Excellent condition, nice molding. This one measures 4x6¼", $5

* "Hole-in-the-wall" Engraved Miniature Portrait of Washington, c.1799. Signed "Sold by W. Spottswood." Tiny stipple and line, under 2½x3 inches. This is a scarce item. In mat and frame $7.50

(The term "hole-in-the-wall" derives from the early inn sign depicting a hole contrived by the masons in building. The portrait style is that of depicting a portrait within such a wall hole. The device was used to a great extent in 17th and 18th centuries.)

"Washington's Birthplace" a watercolor by Chapman, 6x9". Framed, $15

Miniature Pickle Jar Lamp! No fooling. It is a miniature lamp blown in small pickle jar molds. Undoubtedly once stained but now fairly clear glass. Oil reservoir and chimney (both intact) show the high relief rose blowing. This is an unique little item, over all less than a foot high $12.50

Green Bristol Vase (Glass) mounted as a lamp and electrified. 15½" to top of shade lyre $16

Silver topped crystal inkwell. Important size, slightly under 4x4 inches $20

Shelf Bracket of Ornamental Cast Iron, Gilded. Bracket is 12" high, 13" wide and 5½" deep. Useful for clockshelf or for a fine bit of Baroque decor $15

Amateur Oil Portrait of General Washington $12.50

Perhaps some people would call it primitive. We are not of that school. The stretcher and canvas are old. We think the picture is, too. It is signed "Francis."

* IMPORTANT PAIR LARGE STAFFORDSHIRE DOGS. Spaniels, of course. But really big ones, 12½" high. That is big for such spaniels. Yes, these have the pink noses. Pair, $45

Canton Plates. Grey-blue decor of usual pattern. The real thing. Approx. size 8 inches. Each.....$1.75

ABC Plate "Ready for a Ride." Six inch size and don't say you think the brats are lovely children!.....$6

GERMAN PEWTER MEDALLION PLATES. High raised work. "Nuremberg" and "Peter Vischer" 9", each $5

Colored Aquatint: Columbia Glass Works and Delaware Water Gap, by Birch, engraved by Strickland. Hand colored, folio, framed $25

Colored Aquatint: View of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. By Birch, engraved by Strickland. Colored, large folio, framed $25

Tiffany Shaving Stand. Really hot stuff. Gilt latten, or brass, 36" tall with plateau, plus an extension riser of 22" or more, as desired. Beveled mirror, and a pair of candle sockets. It is marked Tiffany & Co. Unbelievable, that's all $50

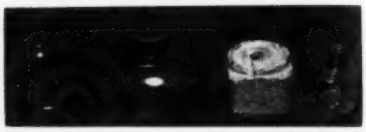
ARLENE SCHLEIGER
6854 Minne Lusa Blvd.
Omaha, Nebraska

Then he told us of another inkwell he wants and expects to find some day. He calls it a "phrenological." We asked him to explain. "It is a pottery or china one, probably Staffordshire or Liverpool, transfer printed. But it is in the shape and form of a bust. The head is divided into phrenological zones or "bumps," by which Fowler and Wells and other practitioners in America would tell you all about yourself. Since this was a science anyone could learn in a hurry, there were lots of amateurs. And every phrenologist who could own one had a phrenological inkwell." We wondered if he knew of any. Yes, he knew of two, one of them owned by a Spinning Wheel contributor. He had heard, at a recent Armory Antiques Show, that a phrenological inkwell might well be worth $100. So might the "False Move" inkwell. They are both fine pieces of work and, as inkwells, they are scarcer now than Revere silver.



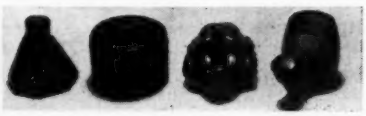
Blown blue glass inkwell, crystal inkwell with ground pontil and pewter top, carved and turned soapstone inkwell, mold blown inkwell of barrel shape. All of these are 19th century.

Silver inkwell in form of a pair of binoculars, turning to reveal porcelain ink containers. Opaque white china inkwell marked "P. Garrett, Penn Mfg. Works, Philada." Molded clear glass with engraved and figured pewter caps. Greenish bottle glass inkwell, probably a school desk type.

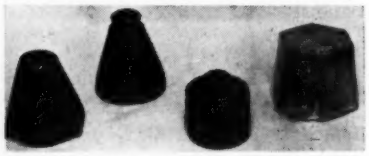
Porcelain inkwell, green-glazed; pyramid shape inkwell of green blown glass; off center "bottle" well, sold filled with ink and ready for use as an inkwell upon removal of cork. There is a groove across the front to hold the pen. Yellow glass, blown, and very bubbly. Pale green glass inkwell with large pontil.

When we looked at the Breeding collection, we were staggered by the task of describing each inkwell in words. This is a story to be told in pictures we thought, with one of those little self hugs we all indulge in. So we asked if we might have pictures. Mr. Breeding agreed that the only way to tell the story was with pictures. So he hauled out a professional miniature camera and we (that is, he) went to work. And here are his pictures, including the "False Move."

We couldn't help but notice the variety of materials represented in the Breeding collection of inkwells. Every kind of pottery—Majolica, Delft, Faience, stoneware, redware, slipware, sgraffito. Transfer-printed, Chinese porcelain made for the American and European markets, and the inkwells made for their own use by the Chinese. Iron inkwells, pewter, block tin, brass, copper, tutenag, packtong, gilt latten, Sheffield plate, silver, gold, enamel, glass of every kind, turned stone, talc, granite, bronze, papier mache, tole, crochet (yes, we mean it, a crocheted silk and linen job around a small stoneware bottle weighted on the bottom with a bag of shot) . . . and that's where we stopped.



Pitkin blown glass inkwell; Stoddard glass inkwell; "Temple Bar" inkwell in the form of a lawyer's head, Codnor Park pottery; blue glass barrel inkwell of teapot type with metallic cap.



Pottery inkwell marked "Josiah Johnson's Japan Writing Fluid, London." Smooth brown pottery inkwell. Rough pottery inkwell with orange label "Arnold's Superior Black Ink, London." "Teapot" inkwell of pink glazed pottery.

Here are pictures and pictures and pictures. If these do not demonstrate what we were assigned to demonstrate in this story, that inkwells are indeed a Profitable New Field for Collecting, then we do not know an opportunity. It is exactly 107 miles from Mr. Breeding's home in New York to our typewriter. We stopped at seven antiques shops on the way. And what do you think? We have seven inkwells, all different, and one we didn't see in the Breeding collection. Our seven inkwells cost us less than $10 ($9.75 to be truthful.) You see, we sort of grasped the opportunity. And it is fun!

Pardon this whisper . . but there is News about Antiques and Collecting that will break in about 30 days . . and we think it will delight you!

Bridal shower gifts arrive. And they're antiques because Jane Powell told friends, relatives and acquaintances that she preferred antiques, and antiques, and antiques. The cat, we understand, is not an antique, even though it is of the ancient Siamese breed.

How Jane Powell Got Her Antiques

by KATHERINE J. JUSTH BAROSS

"MAKE it an antique," is what Jane Powell, young singing star of the movies, said to her friends and relatives when they asked her for suggestions in the way of gifts for her wedding shower.

Smart girl, Jane Powell. She loves antiques, she wanted antiques, they asked her what she wanted, and that's how she got them. Early cut glass, old porcelain, old lamps—at least lamps made from old vases—and old furniture. Jane has a coal scuttle lamp base. She has a stove model lamp base. She has a two-tiered antique table. She has a pair of Directoire sewing tables. She has beautiful old prints framed in magnificent old frames. She has early American paintings—all because she took the trouble to say what she wanted when they asked her what gifts she preferred.

Of course, Jane Powell is really Mrs. Geary Steffen. She knows all about vacuum cleaners, and dusts and polishes all her antiques herself.

This is a tip to all smart young gals. Do what Jane Powell did—ask for antiques.

A Sheraton commode now houses a magnificent collection of records and the necessary playing devices—without injuring one bit the antique quality and status of the furniture. This view in the Hollywood home of Jane Powell, famed songstress and ingenue.

STEAM FIRE ENGINE VANE

No. 223. 7 feet long, with driver, firemen and horses $500 00
" 224. 3 " " " " 175 00

Steam fire engine weather vane by Westervelt frequently, and in error, designated as "folk art." This is a factory-made weather vane. Note the prices paid for this vane in the 1870's.

The Westervelt Company of New York City, established in the 1820's, produced weather vanes ranging in price from $15 upward to $500. Their horse vanes, including effigies of famous pacers, trotters and racers, ranged in price from $15 to $65. Cows and bulls were priced at from $20 to $175. Ox, sheep and pig vanes were priced at $25 to $125. Osceola, the Indian Chief weather vane, was a $40 item. Fish vanes ranged in price from $15.50 upward to $40. Running and leaping deer ranged in price from $30 to $90. Crowing cocks ranged in price from $10 to $70. Flying angels were from $10 for a one foot spread to $500 for a twelve foot spread example! A steam fire engine vane cost $250. A ship vane cost $100, a horse car vane $200, and a locomotive vane $200.

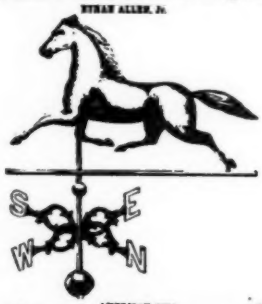
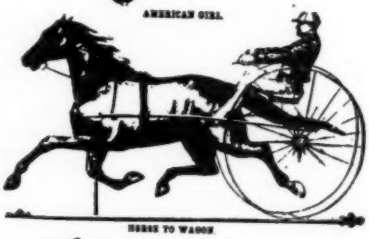
ETHAN ALLEN, Jr.



AMERICAN GIRL



HORSE TO WAGON

Running horse, Ethan Allen, Jr.; trotting horse with sulky, American Girl; Horse to wagon. Three weather vanes by Westervelt of New York, made as late as the 1870's.

It may interest collectors to know that the Burgis view of Boston, 1722, pictures ten structures with weather vanes; the Burgis view of New York, 1722, pictures nine vanes. Early views of Harvard, Yale and Princeton show weather vanes on the towers. Paul Revere's view of Boston shows the Cockerel church vane as a huge bird.

PHILADELPHIA SEASCAPE—NEW TOWNSEND CAMERA

The side standard supported the lantern; the centre piece of upright material is the gas pipe supplying the fixture with its fuel. These lamps were erected in the 1840's.

Early Street and Lane Lighting Fixtures

AN EDITORIAL EXCURSION

THE first street lighting fixtures used in Colonial America, whether in St. Augustine, New York, Boston or Philadelphia, were wrought iron baskets placed atop poles. In the baskets, called cressets, combustible materials of all kinds were burned. A brilliant (!) light could be had by burning tallow or oil-soaked tow, or rags. Kindling wood, pine knots, chandler's waste and cordage—these were the fuels for the cressets which, generally, yielded more smoke than light. Such devices were still standing on the streets of our towns up to and during the Revolution. Frequently a cresset on pole stood before or near an inn or tavern.

Then came the pole with an iron bracket of semi-circular shape which, in turn, supported a large sheet iron tank of oil fitted with a wick an inch thick. These were really open lanterns, maintained by the city at important intersections and at watchmen's boxes. Many citizens of importance maintained their own street lighting facilities by having bearers carry "moons" on rods before them as they walked afoot, or had their coaches fitted with moons. A moon was a lamp enclosed within a round globe of glass, or a sheet iron frame into which panes of mica or thin sheets of horn were fastened. These latter types were unbreakable moons.

By 1790 many city fathers pondered the problem of lighting the streets of their towns, and sought ways and means of doing it with "oeconomy." Few of todays collectors have considered how vital this problem was to a town. The maintenance of a single street light involved a sizable gallonage of oil per year and daily care and attention. The lamps, as they put it, had to be "lighted and outened" or "d'outed". And then the fixture itself was no light investment.

The problem was solved in the age-old manner; by taxing the citizens in general and, at times, the merchants in particular. The lamp-lighter became a well-known character roaming the streets. Street lamps became lanterns, on tall poles, lanterns with from four to eight panes of glass, and a constantly improving type of burner in the lamp proper. Camphene (a mixture of alcohol and turpentine) yielded the most brilliant light. Because this mixture was explosive, it was a dangerous indoors lighting fluid but outdoors it caused no great concern. Lard oil was used for at least a century and was not wholly supplanted by kerosene after that fluid fuel was commercially tapped from 1859. It cannot be said that petroleum was discovered in that year; Petroleum was a place on the mid-18th century maps of the Province of Pennsylvania. As Seneca oil, or rattlesnake oil, it was gathered by the Indians and sold to the settlers—as medicine. Petroleum or rock oil was sold commercially by the pint and quart by several enterprising refiners who gathered seepage from oil wells long before drilling began.

Street lighting fixtures as advertised in 1833. The makers had just completed illuminating Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, when this advertisement appeared.

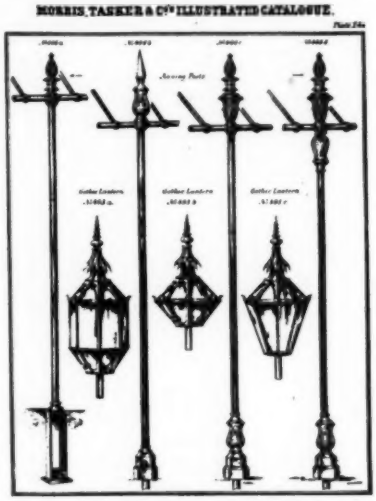
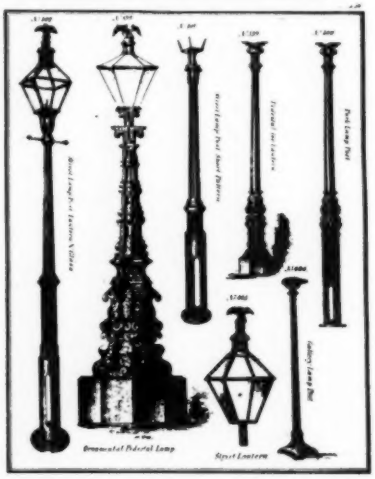
Street lighting fixtures by American Reflector Co., made from 1850's. Used with gas flame, lard oil, and more explosive fluids such as camphene and turpentine.

By 1810 street lighting fixtures were taking on architectural prominence. It is surprising how much information there is on this subject and how apt an otherwise seasoned antiques collector is to miss seeing some of it even while looking squarely at it. Where? How? When? When looking at views of American towns and cities, at paintings of places, street scenes and architectural elevations. Many of these picture some sort of street lighting, even street lights perched on the roofs of the cubicles of watchmen.



A page from the street lighting catalog of Morris Tasker & Co., Philadelphia, 1850's, showing some of their beautiful cast iron standards and their Gothic lighting fixtures. These, generally, were gas fixtures.



Another page from the Morris Tasker catalog, showing a sumptuous standard with six-sided glassed lantern topped by an American eagle. Also shown is a standard lighting fixture and several street lighting standards including the bases which were, of course, buried in the ground. The close-up view of the street lantern is the type using either Palmer candles or lard oil lamps.

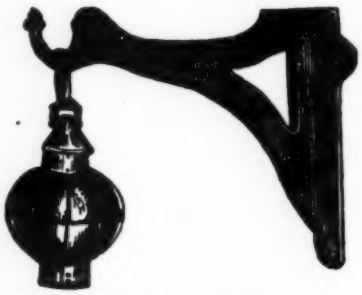
1378 E. 8TH STREET
BROOKLYN 30, N. Y.

In the 1820's we find advertisers of street lighting fixtures appealing not only to the town councils but also to the merchants to light up the towns. And then came the era of cast iron, during which so many types and kinds of street lighting standards were made it would take six full issues of Spinning Wheel to catalog and picture them. Every large foundry seems to have made street lighting standards. Some of them were upright posts, others were brackets to affix to the walls of structures. The repository of pictorial information we have drawn upon for this essay reported to us as follows: "Please advise if you want a thousand, all different, two thousand, all different, from which to make a selection, or whether we should supply an exemplary selection ranging from 1680 to 1880. If you stretch that a few years we can include some beautiful electric lighting standards for it is with the early use of the electric light that street lighting really made great strides in improvement."



The Fiske Co., makers of weather vanes, lamps, lightning rods and stable fixtures produced this sturdy "barn side" bracket used in connection with the globe lantern affixed to it. Such lanterns date from the 1820's.

Self-Extinguishing at any Hour.

Burton's Improved Kerosene Street Lamp.

Patented June 13, and Sept. 5, 1876, and Feb. 19, 1878.

Awarded the First Premium and a Silver Medal, at the New England Fair, held at Worcester, Mass., 1878. The First Prize, at Oak Park Association, Greenfield, and a "Diploma of Excellence", at the N. H. State Fair, 1878.

Price; delivered in Boston, or New York, $25.00. Weight, 200 lbs.

Gigantic street lighting fixture as advertised in 1878. This was a kerosene burner.

Kerosene in an ordinary house-type of lamp, enclosed within a beautiful glass globe having a shade and base for affixing to the top of a pole.

We asked for an exemplary selection. Here it is, with factual data in the form of captions. There are at least ten thousand people who, having no active interest in antiques, have collected one or more old street lighting fixtures to embellish their home grounds. There is, perhaps, a similar number who have collected an old weathervane for their barn, house or garage. Our country has more occasional collectors than it has regular collectors. Spinning Wheel, in its philosophy of service to all, must take this cosmic attitude: What is spun from this wheel may serve master or servant, lady or maid, rich man or beggar. It is our function to spin the warp and the woof, and let others weave the cloth they will and fashion it into garments that suit their fancy!

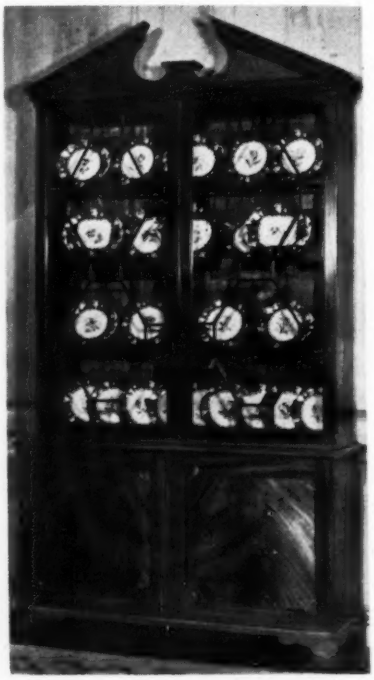
American Collecting Owes Its Growth to Quests for Classics Such as These . . .

by Davies Kent-Boyd

It is really quite simple. Just as all rich, rare, prime and luxury items of every sort became the models from which good or bad imitations were made (and in such making developed other forms and tangents), so it is with collecting these objects. The first collectors were either exceedingly well-endowed with cash or with scholastic ability—generally both! Their followers made the vogue of collecting a popular pursuit. So, and against it is quite simple, we have very wealthy people collecting the imitations of the original rich and rare things . . . and calling it rural or something, and a quite wide-awake company of people who, if they now have somewhat limited purses, do have unlimited good sense when it comes to selecting a rare piece and knowing its value.

Now, in America, there is a lessening of the prejudice which somehow deprived some American collectors from enjoying fine English antiques.



A very fine Chippendale bookcase or china cabinet of c. 1755. It is mahogany with a delicately carved cornice. It is 8'8" high, 4'8" wide and 20 inches deep, and was priced at 230 pounds.

Oh, no! This library chair is not Chippendale, it is of George I period, about 1730. The cabriole legs terminate in lions paw feet, the knees are acanthus carved. The chair is of walnut and the price was 280 pounds.

The prejudice was natural; American collectors wanted, and were willing to pay a premium for, American made antiques. Yet in all truth many fine pieces of English furniture were shipped as new merchandise to wealthy buyers in the colonies prior to 1776. It is said that considerable English furniture was also carried to the colonies by officials and settlers, not only before the American Revolution but for long years afterward. There may be some excellent English furniture that has survived the years in your great state of Tennessee. That state (need America be reminded?) captured the imagination of many sturdy English people of some substance who migrated there, carrying with them much good furniture to make their new homes on a few hundred or a thousand of Tennessee's broad and fertile acres.

With the cooperation of Messrs. Gregory & Company Ltd. of Berkeley Square, London, I have the pleasure of picturing several quite fine examples of antiques and am permitted to quote the prices in English pounds. This comparison, price-wise, need in no case be considered invidious. There is really much fine antique furniture of the 18th and early 19th centuries in England still. There was so much of it to start with that the sum total was considerable. And then, again, English owners had the happy habit of keeping what the family had accumulated, without recourse to furnishing anew, and added only, in each generation, what the family required.

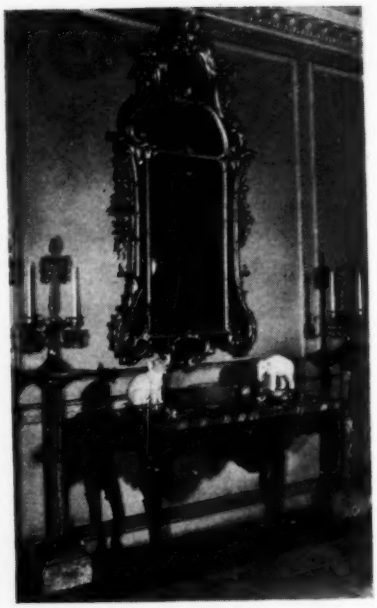
Serpentine fronted and sided, this classic table of mahogany is a fine Adam example and a masterpiece. It is a side serving table, 2'9" high, 5'7" wide and 2'7" deep. The date is around 1790. The price was 175 pounds. The compot mirror is early 18th century, probably 1720. The price of this lovely item was 145 pounds.

A three-part extensible dining table of faded mahogany, and end tables on tripod and pillar supports, the centre table with two leaves and a drawer at both sides. This table extends to 9'9" over-all.



The side table is Irish Chippendale of c. 1765. The top is marbleized. The price card read 130 pounds. The mirror is a quite important Chippendale one, circa 1760. It is carved and gilt. This quite fine piece was priced at 120 pounds.

What I have said here, and what I am permitted to divulge about prices current in England, is not primarily a suggestion that collectors come to England to buy antiques. Your own dealers are quite competent to order from their brother dealers in England, and to take upon themselves the burden of importation. But I do hope this pictorial display will demonstrate that fine antiques are still obtainable if you will accept them from the same source from which comes your language, your heritage, your social and political freedoms. We must not forget this essay is about antiques, traditions, and the days of long ago.

We Beg the Pardon of the New Castle, PENNSYLVANIA Antiques Show . . . . .

By the wierdest of coincidences, Spinning Wheel received two requests from cities named New Castle to advertise Antiques Shows on precisely the same dates, and signed by authorities whose first names were alike. The Gremlins got their hooks into the situation and said "this MUST be a duplication." And it wasn't at all and so the New Castle, Pennsylvania, Antiques Show, April 26, 27 and 28 is hereby handed not only the regrets of Spinning Wheel . . . but a plea to all Dealers to remember there is a show at New Castle, Penna., that is a part of the Spinning Wheel Calendar of Shows.

Photograph of actual Schoenhut circus toys collected by the writer since falling under the spell of this, the most logical variant of doll collecting available to just everybody and anybody.

This Collecting is a Circus!

. . . that's because it is assembling a Circus by collecting Schoenhut Circus Toys

by Claire T. McClellan

ALBERT Schoenhut came to America shortly after the end of the War-Between-the-States. He was the third generation of a toy manufacturing family in Germany. In 1872 at Philadelphia he started his own toy-making career in the United States by building one of the largest factories in this country devoted exclusively to the manufacture of toys. In 1903 he put on the market his now famous Humpty-Dumpty Circus. There are many American just entering—or approaching — their fifties who played with a Schoenhut Humpty-Dumpty circus. The philosophy of this toy was such that if you had a dozen toys you could have a small circus, and each year it could be added to by that popular guy, Santa Claus, and finally you would have a big circus.

The first set of circus toys by Schoenhut consisted of a clown, a ladder and a chair. Then followed a donkey, an elephant, and finally, the complete circus, including band wagons, musicians and animal cages drawn by horses. Eventually the circus had everything, with all the trappings and all the props, including hoboes, colored dudes, rustic farmers, Chinese acrobats, aerialists, riders, ring masters—everything. The toys were made of wood with elastic joints that could be renewed. Head, torso, limbs, hands and feet are separate pieces. The extremities are grooved to fit rungs of ladders in order to hold desired positions. The grooves in the hands enabled the toys to grasp weights, whips, hoops and other props. There was much paraphernalia in addition to the effigies of living performers in the circus and this paraphernalia is today harder to find Advertisement of Schoenhut circus toys by an American wholesaler. One of the great errors we have committed in the past is, because of the Germanic nature of the name Schoenhut, we have thought these toys were "made in Germany." They are American. Made in Philadelphia, Pa., U.S.A. And they were the envy of German manufacturers because these toys were imported BY Germany and were both expensive and popular there.

than the performers. Perhaps, being smaller, they were more easily lost. These toys were never five and ten cent store items; the clown toy was a dollar. But a Schoenhut toy circus lasted and lasted, and it is because of this lasting quality that today we have an opportunity to collect them.

When these circus toys were first placed on the market American toy buyers were reluctant to purchase them for these were sturdy, quality toys and could not be sold cheaply. However, German toy buyers bought all the firm could supply. This was in the hey-day of the kindergarten, with its emphasis on a toy's play value, which was the forerunner of our modern nursery school. Many German toymakers were chagrined that an American toy could invade their home market, and offered a prize for a better toy. There is no record of the prize ever having been won. It was not long before the American market was absorbing most of the firms output of circus toys.

Facing pages 10 & 11 from the Schoenhut catalog dealing almost exclusively with "the Circus." There are also pictures of the Schoenhut all-wood doll and the famed toy pianos by the same firm, but the catalog is circus, listing and picturing all performers, animal and human, and all appurtenances. The catalogs, it may be said, are scarcer than the toys.

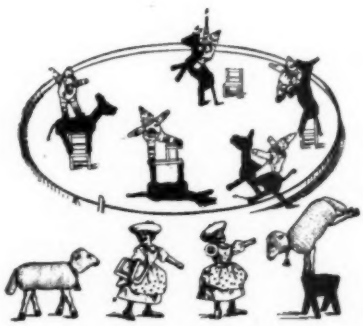
After the first World War, some of the circus figures were made in a smaller size to appeal to smaller children, but the older toys and the newer ones went well together. Because the toys were not cheap, the depression brought about the liquidation of the firm in 1935. Mr. Otto Schoenhut, the youngest member of the family, from whom I have obtained most of my information, retained the rights to the circus. These rights were recently passed on to a friend who had loved the toys as a child. Under his supervision some pieces are now being put on the market by the firm in Seneca Falls, N. Y. So far the clown, donkey, elephant, horse and some props have been manufactured, but they expect to add a cowboy with a Palomino pony soon. These new toys are most attractive in their own right, well-made and sturdy, but not exact imitations of the old models.

One could go on and on with words about collecting Schoenhut circus toys, but if we revert to the Chinese saying that "one picture is worth a thousand words", we can do no better than depend upon pictures. The photographs are toys I have collected. The other illustrations are taken directly from the catalog of the Schoenhut Company.



How can you have fun with the clowns and with Mary and her little lamb. From the Schoenhut catalog.

The toys in these sets can be played with in the same manner as the Circus Toys, in fact make very good additions to a Circus outfit.

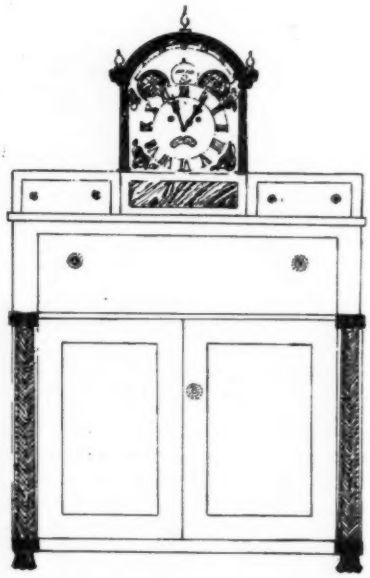
Desk Clock Unknown Here?

No! Says Clock Book Author.

The desk clock featured in the April 1951 Spinning Wheel "What is it?" section caught my eye at once. Congratulations on being the first antiques publication to note this vagary in clock case design. As it happens the idea did cross over from England and clock cases on the utilitarian plan were made here as bureau clocks. Here is one to prove the point. It was purchased in 1929 from Miss Mabel Hoover of Curryville, Pennsylvania, in whose family it had been for 90 some years. Obviously the bureau is of the 1830-1840 period, and it is made of cherry, pine and mahogany. That section under the facecase is a door permitting access to the movement and to start the pendulum. The pendulum swings inside the bureau and the weights drop in special wells. This clock is now owned by William S. Whitmore, Esq., of Shellsburg, Pennsylvania who promises to let me have a photograph of this unique clock of American make as soon as he can get a photographer to take it. Meantime here is your evidence in the form of a good drawing made on the spot, from the Whitmore clock. There is no makers name on it.

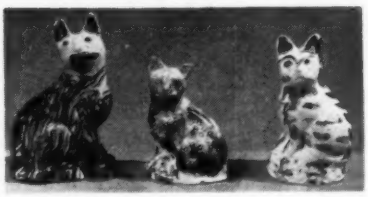


The movement is brass, 8-day, with time, strike, moon phase and day of month indicator. The dial is painted and the back plate carries the name Osborn. This is of course the British clock part and dial manufacturing firm who sold innumerable dials, dial plates and back plates to American clockmakers. This "clock" stands 7 feet high. The bureau proper is 4 feet wide and 26 inches deep. There is a curly maple inlay on the clock movement door under the dial and hood. The hood columns are 18 inches high. This should tell the story. Carl W. Drepperd

What Is It?

In Which Readers Queries are Answered by Others...

Here are your Calico Cats!



By courtesy of the famed D. M. & P. Manheim Galleries of 7, Manchester Street, London, England, we can picture three of the calico cats commented upon in these pages some months ago. The unusual pattern of coloration used on each cat is at times underglaze and at times overglaze. These, of course, are Staffordshire. Photograph by Heaton, Ltd.

Who Was X. Bazin and What Did He Make?

Xavier Bazin, born near Paris 1816, was apprenticed to M. Landon, perfumer (see Spinning Wheel, December 1949, which shows perfume bottles and jars from Landon's works) and then worked for the firm of L. Piver. Bazin came to the United States in 1842 and established a perfume and cosmetic business at Philadelphia, where he prospered. His products did not survive, but his containers for rose cream, facial cream, paste soaps and perfumes are most avidly collected. Especially desirable are his Staffordshire (or French) transfer printed china soap and cream packages with decorative lids. All bear the imprint "X. Bazin, Philadelphia".

Not a Bar-butter Dish But a Loaf-sugar Dish!

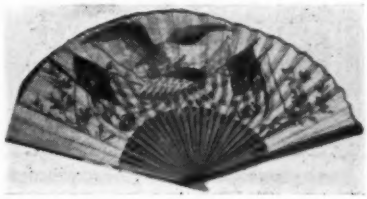
The editor must often sit on the repentence stool, but this time we like it. Mrs. Ruth Studley calls our attention to the cut glass dish designated as a bar-butter dish in the article by Ruth Gist Pickens, Spinning Wheel for March, 1951, page 16. It just isn't a bar-butter dish at all. It is a covered loaf sugar dish, or holder, and that, most positively, is that. Thank you Mrs. Studley.

What is this lamp?

It is a crusie, a fat lamp, a Betty lamp, if you will, with a bird perched on the lid, the lamp reservoir in the form of a human foot cased in a sandal. So we know what it is. But how old is it? From whence does it come? The material is an alloy, probably bronze. It was found in California and is believed to be of Spanish origin. One guess is that it represents the toe of St. Peter giving light, and if so, it may have been a sacramental light in one of the early Spanish missions.

At any rate, here is the picture as a challenge to all readers of Spinning Wheel, and to all scholars who may see it. The owner is F. J. Seccombe of Oakland, California. The photo is by Associated Press.

What is this Historic Fan? There is a view of Independence Hall on the other side of it.



Your inquiry is answered by Mrs. Dolly Lightfoot, of Richmond, Virginia and Miami, Florida. Says Mrs. Lightfoot: "My grandmother came home from the Philadelphia Centennial of 1876 and gave them to my Mother and my Aunts. These fans were made in China, printed from wood blocks in many colors. The display of the American flags is perfectly gorgeous. These fans sold, I believe, for 25¢ each as souvenirs. Today I have seen them priced at $25 and higher. Because they are somewhat fragile, and were much used as "display" pieces in many homes, it would seem that a very few of them have survived the 75 years since that famous world's fair."

Is there a Bird Print with a picture of Key West, Florida?

We know of only one; quite rare in its original elephant folio size, but not so in its smaller sizes. It is the "Great White Heron" by Audubon. That town on the skyline is quite definitely Key West, Florida. This print in its original large sizze, engraved by Havell (not the later lithographs) is a valuable item selling currently from $150 upward retail . . . if you can find one.

What Is It?

In Which Readers Queries are Answered by Others...

Please identify these Curious Cake Cutters which will not work. What are they? Cake dough will not fall from them when cut!

The "cutters" pictured posed a problem without solution until Miss Blanche Hartman of Lancaster, Pennsylvania gave us the explanation. No matter how much these devices look like cake cuters they were not made for such use. Yet they were made by tinsmiths in precisely the cake cutter technique. The clue to the use lies in the fact there are no "air holes" which were in the cake cutters to prevent the suction or vacuum pockets that otherwise hold the dough in the cutter. These are quilt pattern stamps. A platter of starch water, the consistency of light cream was the "ink" in which these stamps were dipped, just deeply enough to coat the edges. The stamp was then applied to the quilt, or the patches, where it left a clear white outline. When stitched through, the dry starch lines were readily brushed off. It is quite probably than any such devices now considered to be cake or cookie cutters, but not having the air holes, were actually made for use as quilting pattern stamps. And since we know of this usage it is also logical to assume (since any cookie cutter could be used as a stamp by the method here described) that cookie cutters were also used for this purpose. But it seems the ones without holes were quite definitely made as quilting pattern stamps. The one above that looks like a very modern signpainters "S" is a repeat stamp to indicate the stitching for a six line scalloped border.

I have a Framed Market Scene Lithograph like the enclosed photograph. What is it?

Your lithograph of a market scene, without title, was published by the American Sunday School Union in the 1840's or 1850's. The prints were in a portfolio and the titles and captions were printed opposite the pictures. The view you send is titled, "The Farmer At Market". There were other pictures in this series, as follows: "A Ride to the City", "A Village Store", "The Coal Cart", "The Oyster Man", "Idle Talk", "The Wood Cart", "Stagecoach On the Mountains", "Scene In the Country", "The Draymen", "Sunday in the Country", and the view you have. All of these, in portfolio are titled, "Common Sights in Town and Country". They are lithographs designed and printed by "A. Kollner's Lith., Phila." and "H. Camp's Litho Press". Complete copies of the portfolio are now quite scarce.

French Tobacco Jar for Pharmacist or Chemists?

No. Believe it or not, it is a tobacco package! The content was the French equivalent of that famed American brand "Bull Durham" . . . but what a difference in the container! This delightfully shaped bulbous jar is of hand painted porcelain, marked L.G. and dated 1870 (MDCCCLXX) The floral sprays of roses and daisies are in full color. The painted label reading TABAC is black, on green. The screw-on top is pewter, with a bail handle. It bears the mark "Brevete.S.T.,ST DG".

Florida Gun Collectors Meet May 13 at Orlando

Mr. Herbert Brand of Miami Shores, and formerly of Cincinnati, advises Spinning Wheel that the very active Florida Gun Collectors Association will hold its first annual meeting at Hotel Angebilt, Orlando, Florida, on Sunday May 13th. Gun collecting has never lagged as an antiquarian pursuit although Guns, as collectors items, have not had even a quarter of the publicity that Pressed Glass has enjoyed. Yet there is considerably more scholarly literature on the subject of Guns, and some of it is of great antiquity in its own right. The firearm of history begins with the discovery that the Chinese had gunpowder and the use of this mysterious explosive to propel a projectile out of a hollowed block. The first artillery was made of marble. Then of heavy wood staves, iron bound!

Antique Antics

BUTTER MOLD TIE-BACK

The carved plungers from old wooden butter molds make unusual and attractive curtain tie-backs. The plunger may be removed from the mold simply by unscrewing the handle. A double end screw is then set into the handle and the tie-back attached to the window frame as shown. A coat or two of white shellac makes a good finish or they could be painted in color to harmonize with your color scheme.

Hallmarks on U.S. Silver?

The answer is yes, but rarely, and here is an advertisement of 1850 to prove that at least one American Silversmith was using the equivalent of Hallmarks, one of which was the American Shield. This firm, originally Bailey and Co., is still in business.

YOU will profit!

by selling lamps that your customers now refuse to buy because they are not electrified

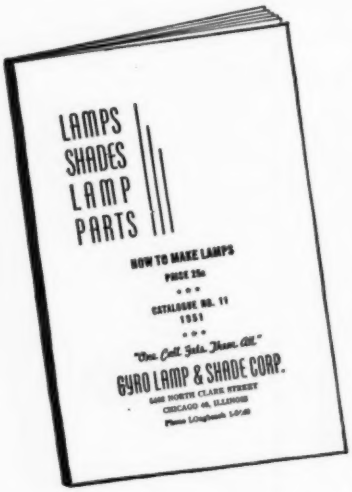
In one-half minute you can screw in a GYRO CONVERTER and the sale is made, with the added profit of the converter. Increase your income with a stock of GYRO CONVERTERS. Enhance the sale of lamps. Sell to those who wish to electrify their own. One of the most popular is the GYRO QUEEN CONVERTER (shown above). The all brass burner which fits a No. 2 lamp. Has the original style wick key—no unsightly knob to detract from the antique charm. Now packed in the familiar green carton for shelf display.



All these converters, as well as all parts for antique lamps, with easy-to-understand charts for electrifying GWTW lamps with light in base are shown in the 64 page illustrated catalog.

Send 25c today for this interesting booklet and if you are a dealer send card or letterhead for new quantity discounts. If you have an old catalog cut off and mail the lower part of the front cover and the new 1951 catalog will be sent FREE. Prices in all former catalogs are now void.
